Notarial Services

Many transactions in foreign countries, for commercial clients, will require documents to be signed in the presence of a Notary Public, or copy documents to be certified by a Notary Public.

We can also verify translations.

If you are involved with an overseas transaction, we recommend that you check with your contact in the foreign jurisdiction when notarised documents will be required. Your contact maybe a lawyer, customer, your own office or public official.

You can then contact us to arrange meetings with our Notaries at appropriate times. We can ensure that all documents are correctly produced, notarised and submitted for any other endorsements which may be required.

We can liaise with overseas lawyers, arrange for documents to be translated and provide advice on the process throughout.

Many countries require documents, to have the Hague Apostille attached. This process, commonly known as "legalisation" is carried out in the UK by the Foreign & Commonwealth Office. We can advise whether documents for a particular country need to be legalised, but it is also prudent to check with the recipient in the foreign jurisdiction whether it is their understanding that legalisation is required.

Some countries require legalisation by their own Embassies or Consulates in the UK, usually in addition to the attachment of the Hague Apostille as above. This process may require considerable time and substantial fees. Again, it is important to check as early as possible whether such further legalisation will be required.
